Snow Is Treat For Visitors

Major John Whistler, U.S.Air Force, of Myrtle Beach, Mrs. Whistler (Betty) and their daughter Jodie, 12 and son John 10, were among the holiday visitors to Appomattox.

The Whistlers own farmland on Route 1, a part of the "old Chilton place". Says Major Whistler, Someday, when his service time is completed they plan to live in Appomattox.

The snow is a treat for Jodie and John says the Major because his tours of duty have carried his family to Hawaii and to parts of the southland where snow is seldom seen.

They had planned to stay a few days in a mobile home on their Appomattox property but heavy snows caused a change in plans and a stay at Caldwell's Motor Court.

Mr. and Mrs. H. N. Hunt and Bill, of Raleigh, N.C., and Mrs. Sadie R. Owen, of Richmond, spent the holidays with Mrs. Hazel R. Mann and Mrs. W. R. Reynolds.

WMU Board To Meet Jan. 5

The Executive Board of the Appomattox Association Women's Missionary Union will meet at Liberty Baptist Church Monday, Jan. 5 at 10:00 a.m. according to an announcement by the superintendent, Mrs. V. L. Nuckols.

The Board includes all of the Associational WMU officers and presidents of each local society. All minister's wives are also asked to attend.

This will be an important meeting to plan the annual meeting-in-training on February 26 at Bethel Church.

Plans also have to be made concerning "Tithes of the Fair" and new changes taking place in the Southern Baptist Church.

The April spring prayer meeting will have to be considered also, says the superintendent in urging everyone to be present for the planning session.

Pineview Thanks Everyone For Visits & Gifts

Church and school and civic groups plus interested individuals made Christmas a "wonderful one" for the 19 men and women who live at Pineview Rest Home, reports Mrs. Marie Tyler, who together with her husband Ben, owns and manages the home at Spout Spring.

Everyone in the home received a basket of fruit and treats from Ruritans of Spout Spring. Mrs. Elliott, instructor at Carver-Price, and her class provided wreaths for the doors.

Girl Scouts of Troop 311 came on Dec. 15 to decorate a tree and distribute gifts. On Dec. 21 a choir of singers from the Jr. Class, Reedy Springs Baptist Church sang carols under the direction of their teacher, Mrs. Herbert Garrett.

Mrs. Tyler says, "We all enjoyed the visits on Dec. 23 of the Rev. L. L. Schwemer and church members from Spout Spring Baptist Church singing carols." Also on the 23rd the Rev. Blankenship of Lynchburg came with presents and that same day Mr. Morgan Woodall of Newport News, Va. came and brought gifts for all the guests and the staff. "All these kindacts made our Christmas a very, very happy one," says Mrs. Tyler.

ROCKS

Dec. 29 – The first snow of the season started falling here on Christmas Day.

Many families had their get together during the holidays.

Hunter Martin is slowly improving at Va. Baptist Hospital. A number called to see him last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Hutson Dickerson spent Saturday with Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Dickerson and Christine.

Sympathy is extended the Mr. Ed McPhillips family in his death last week.

No services were held at Rocks last Sunday on account of the deep snow.

Clarence Richardson killed a deer on Christmas Eve.

The children are glad to be at home from school.

Guest Of National Magazine

William Harvey, 11 year old, was given a special pre-Christmas gift in the form of a trip to Washington at the invitation of the National Geographic Society.

Son of Mrs. Thomas C. Harvey, Jr. and the late Mr. Harvey, William is the creator of the Doughgirl doll, modeled after his great - great grandmother, Mrs. Drury Woodson, of Appomattox, who was nicknamed the "Doughgirl" because she made up batches upon batches of hot bread to feed returning soldiers wearing both blue and gray following the end of the War Between the States.

His visit to the capital on December 16 included a tour of the Smithsonian Institute, the plant of the National Geographic and other places of interest.

William began his career as a maker of Doughgirl dolls three years ago at the suggestion of his grandmother, Mrs. Thomas C. Harvey of Vera. He fashioned the first doll from beeswax from which he made the original mold. Mrs. Harvey makes the clothes for the dolls and William clothes for the dolls. He has been interested in ceramics since he was very young.

His latest project is a series of "First Lady" dolls, replicas of the wives of presidents of the United States. So far he has done Mrs. Harry S. Truman, Mrs. F. D. Roosevelt, Mrs. Lyndon B. Johnson and Mrs. Richard Nixon.

The money earned from the doll business is earmarked for college says William. He hopes to become an electronics engineer and to attend Virginia Polytechnic Institute.

The National Geographic is keeping a file of pictures and information about the "Doughgirl" and its creator with plans for a future photo layout and article in a future issue.

In the meantime, sale of Doughgirl dolls, picture plates and stationery provides tourists with a glimpse of Civil War times. There's "Lula", also – replica of Lula McLean holding the rag doll which was present in the McLean parlor, the so called "Silent Witness" to the signing of peace terms by Generals Lee and Grant.

William Harvey, of Appomattox, creator of the Doughgirl doll was guest of the National Geographic Society in Washington before Christmas. He brought back the moon map shown here plus several books, and slides, gifts of the Society. Host for the all-day tour and luncheon was Donald Crump, an editor for the National Geographic.

And for parents and friends of young people who show talent in a given field, William's success as a craftsman and businessman can give encouragement to others to give a new idea a try.
